DESIGNERS ARE RECLAIMING THE COLOUR FROM BARBIE FOR A TONGUE-IN-CHEEK BUBBLEGUM POP MOMENT

Top row, from left: leather sofas and bottle-green walls at the Tom Dixon–designed Mondrian hotel on London’s South Bank; known for its cruffins (croissants baked in a muffin tin), Mr Holmes Bakehouse in San Francisco also has stores in LA and Seoul; East London hotel Leman Locke was designed by Gryzwinski + Pons with apartment living and co-working in mind; a concrete breakfast bar dominates Bronte on London’s Strand; Paul Smith’s vivid shopfront is a showstopper on West Hollywood’s Melrose Avenue.

Middle row, from left: Hyde at London’s Leman Locke is a cold-pressed juice counter by day and a cocktail bar by night; named after chef Julien Royer’s grandmother, Odette, Singapore’s hottest restaurant is housed in the National Gallery; the courtyard swimming pool at Rosas & Xocolate hotel in Mérida, Mexico; the Paintbase nail salon in Raleigh, North Carolina; interiors at Italian restaurant Pietro Nolita in downtown Manhattan were styled on a Fifties diner – and then painted pink.
